HO IS THE MISSING LINK?

STARR LEFT HER HOME AT 12 ST. LUKES PLACE—

ENTERED PIER 56, FOOT OF 13TH ST., WHERE MAURETANIA WAS DOCKED—

SHE LEFT PIER IN CAB AND GOT OUT AT 14TH ST. AND TENTH AVE.—

WHERE DID STARR GO AFTER SHE LEFT CAB AND BEFORE—

HER BATTERED BODY WAS FOUND ON LONG BEACH.

STARR'S DIARY TELLS THE SECRETS OF HER STRANGE, DUAL LIFE.

RUDOLPH HAYBROOK
London scenic artist, former friend of Starr Faithfull's sister, Elizabeth, who revealed details of Starr's life in London.

STANLEY E. FAITHFULL
Starr's stepfather is dazed and disillusioned by the revelations of the girl's adventures into that dark half-world where she consorted with the murderous pack who brought about her death and threw her into the sea off Long Island to cover it up as a suicide.

FRANK W. WYMAN
Whose heart is seared 'by grief that only a father can know as clue after clue brings to light the lurid details of his daughter's past.

CAUGHT IN SPOTLIGHT
Mother and sister of the slain girl. They stand in the pitiless glare of publicity which blazes upon every crumb detail of the case, futilely seeking the fatal link in the chain that bound Starr to her doom.

RIOTS IN SIGHT, SAYS THOMAS

Northampton, June 15 (AP)—Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, today, at the 53d annual commencement exercises of Smith College, urged 600 seniors on to "new pioneering in social relations" if "serious riots and revolutions" are to be prevented in the United States.

"It was no roaring radical," he said, "but a sober professor of economics, a Democrat in politics, who told me the other day that three or four years more of such depression as we are now enduring, with the same hotheaded and stupid indifference to the misery of the unemployed would mean violent revolution in America."

"I am doubtful of the revolution," Thomas added, "but I do expect riots and revolts within three years unless we substitute plan for chaos in relief and in our whole economic order."

Thomas said his purpose, however, was "less to predict what forms great violence may take if we drift than to argue that we must not drift."

DRY LAW CALLED WET STATE TAX

Washington, June 15 (AP)—A claim that the cost of prohibition is more heavily upon the wet states than the dry was advanced today by the Crusaders.

"I am anxious to cheer you up, but I can't think except that we are only living in the future—then when you sail for dear old London, I will see darling you. Don't worry about—When we are nineteen we say all sorts of things. I have an old diary that proves that."

Rudolf Haybrook, the slain girl's closest friend in London, said in a London Daily Mail interview this morning:

"Those who knew Starr remember her for her very fine and generous character. Anything so far removed from her in an unfortunate light happened when she was under some influence. Even a small amount of alcohol made her a different person."

"When she was a great hostess, she was too much of an idealist and dreamer to ever smell a rat."

"During her last visit here she gave her friends little camps for weary. It's a story of her appearing in the nude, wildly hysterical, in a peculiar way."

Little additional information on Starr Faithfull's habits as her many visits to London was forthcoming today, save from the one

Booze Was Starr's Cure for Blues, She Wrote

By ROBERT WELLES RITCHIE
Universal Service Special Cable.
London, June 15—Further extracts of letters written by Starr Faithfull, New York girl found mysteriously dead, are published in this morning's Daily Mail. The letters are addressed to 12 St. Luke's pl., New York city, the home of the girl. Excerpts of the letters follow:

"You have no conception of how much you are missed. Everything is stupid without you. Even the outlook is lathsome."

"I wish I could feel more kindly about — He seems to be sort of a living simple futility."

"It is true that nothing succeeds like success. It is also true that nothing fails so completely as failure."

Another letter says:

"In practically every letter, you say be good. You should see how damnably good I have become."

Then, contradicting herself, Miss Faithfull writes:

"I want to go on a terrific bender. A champagne bender is all very well when one is fat, but now I am thin. Well, we will see."

Another letter says:

YALE SENIORS STAGE IVY DAY

New Haven, June 15 (INS)—Ivies were planted, speeches made and poems recited by Yale seniors today. Both Schiefelbusch Scientific and Yale College held class day exercises and graduates to the number of about 8000 held field day as the 25th commencement season set into its stride.

Alan S. Howard of Lowell was chairman of Schiefelbusch class day exercises. Class day speakers were Robert M. Ferris, M. of Montclair, N. J.; Howard M. Hamer, Jr. of Cleveland; Leonard L. Altman, Jr. of Denver; and Gordon M. Henderson, New Haven.

Class day exercises for college were held at 8 o'clock this afternoon. Prior to this gathering the alumni board held its annual meeting, and then met for lunch with the faculty.

The Law School Alumni Association and the Association of Yale Alumni in Medicine also held annual luncheons.

Thomas D. Thatcher, solicitor general of the United States, presided over the law school with a portrait of Chief Justice Oliver Ellsworth, who graduated from Yale in 1790.

Donald R. McEwen, Jr., Lake Forest, Ill., was to preside over the Yale College class day exercises this afternoon. Lyttleton Fox, New York; Charles Payne, New York; John L. Caskey, Wellesley Hills, Mass.; and Lewis A. Lapham of San Francisco were slated as speakers.

and HER DEATH?

NO REST—EVEN IN DEATH

Girl Slain on Boat Ride, 'Craig Kennedy' Finds

The Boston Evening American presents herewith the first of a series of articles on the Starr Faithfull death mystery by Arthur E. Reeves, famous criminologist, whose achievements in scientific detection have won commendation from professional detectives. The views here presented are those of Mr. Reeves and not of this newspaper.

Creator of "Craig Kennedy, Scientific Detective," and Author of the book "What Price Crime?"

(Copyright, 1931, by Boston Evening American, Inc., and Evening Review, Inc.)

Oyster Bay, N. Y., June 15—Starr Faithfull, "Blondie, the Good-Time Girl," was taken for a ride—a boat ride.

This is the conclusion I have come to after studying the facts as presented by Universal Service and from conversations with Dr. Otto H. Schultze and Inspector Harold P. King of Nassau County.

My conversations with Dr. Schultze, who performed the autopsy on the "good-time girl," and with Inspector King, the "Craig Kennedy" of the case, brought out the facts which have not been revealed to the public.

Everybody has assumed that her body—in life—went from the shore at Long Beach into the water. The fact is that her body—in life—came to the shore at Long Beach from the water.

$312,500 RUM CARGOES TAKEN

New York, June 15 (AP)—Coast guard forces seized the steam yacht Guard off Montauk Point, Long Island, today, early today, declaring it had a cargo of rum worth more than $300,000.

The yacht, valued at $100,000, with a prize crew aboard, was brought to New York and anchored off the Statue of Liberty, where officials questioned the crew of 30.

The yacht was captured by the destroyer Cummings, in command of Lieut. Commander Blum. Guardsmen said they followed her inside the 12-mile limit, after she had been seen alongside a "mother ship."

A coast guard patrol boat seized the speed boat C-22545 of New York, carrying 500 sacks of liquor valued at $125,000 in Block Island, and seized the other ship.

With a crew of 15 the C-22545 was halted by warning shots. The prisoners gave their names as Peter Hanson and Fred Leith, both of East Hampton, L. I.

Dr. Cadman Given Degree at Bates

Lawrence, Mass., June 13 (AP)—Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, New York, was awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws at the 65th annual commencement at Bates College today.

Other honorary degrees were: Doctor of Laws, William Phillips, former ambassador to Belgium and American minister to Canada; James H. Bushbrooke, of London, general secretary of the Baptist World Alliance; Doctor of Science, Herbert V. Noel, professor of zoology of Tufts College; Doctor of Education, Bertram E. Patterson, state commissioner of education; Frank E. Hancome, principal of Orlin Academy, Bethel; Master of Arts, Hal Chase, Bethel; and Master of Arts, Hal Chase, Bethel.

FIVE KILLED IN EUROPE STORM

London, June 15 (AP)—Two persons were killed, scores suffered minor injuries and considerable property was destroyed by a freak storm which ravaged large areas of England and Wales yesterday.

Half a square mile was laid waste in Birmingham by violent thunder storms and wind squalls. Many houses were partially demolished, hundreds of roofs were ripped off. There were heavy rains and floods in Glasgow, Liverpool and other places.

Lightning did some damage and hallooms an inch in diameter fell. In Brussels, Belgium, one person was killed and several others injured by a violent windstorm which did considerable damage to buildings.

A cyclone storm swept the western coast of France and produced strange atmospheric disturbances in the interior.

Many Americans in such places as Paris-Pigeon and Trouville were caught in sandstorms which filled eyes with sand. In Normandy the storm was accompanied by extraordinarily large hallooms. The lower quarters of the town were inundated.

At Dunkirk an automobile was swept from the highway by the wind and dropped into a canal. Two Belgians, a man and a woman, were drowned.

Wheeler Back to Face Theft Charge

Worcester, June 15—George L. Wheeler, formerly of this state, was brought here today from Shelby, Mich. by State Detective Edward J. McCarthy on an indictment warrant charging larceny of $200 from Judge John L. Smith of Shelby.

Police say Wheeler is also suspected of connection with a series of film-films worked in this section and western Massachusetts several years ago.

No Debt Suspension Plan—MacDonald

London, June 15 (AP)—Premier MacDonald today told the House of Commons that Germany proposes to ask for a suspension of her debt payments.

Asked if he had such information, the Premier replied: "The answer is in the negative."

Chinese Girl Red Shot With 10 Men

Shanghai, June 15 (AP)—A 17-year-old Chinese girl red, arrested at Chinkiang, a Yangtze River port, has been executed with 10 men by a firing squad. She scorned a chance to live as she renounced communism.

STARR'S FATHER BACK IN BOSTON

Frank W. Wyman, 24, father of the slain Starr Faithfull, returned today to his office in Washington at, from New York, his part in the investigation into the enigma of his daughter's death admittedly shadowed.

Interviewed in the office of the Maine Lakes Corp., 117 Federal st., of which he is vice-president, Wyman declared he had re-entered the life of his estranged family only as a mourner at the obsequies of the slain girl.

"There is nothing I can add to the statements I have already made," he said.

"I have not seen Starr's diary, and I know nothing of its contents. I have heard the reports that there are initials and names of friends in its pages, but the diary itself is in the hands of Dist. Atty. Edwards. I have not seen it."

"Do you believe, Mr. Wyman, that your daughter was a suicide, or that she was murdered?" he was asked.

"I believe with the authorities that Starr was murdered, and that her slayers will be discovered."

"In their discovery I will have no part, except as I may be able to assist. The investigation through knowledge of my daughter's life up to the time of our separation."

"I am satisfied that Mr. and Mrs. Faithfull, my daughter, Trudy and I, and Mr. Edwards are moving toward the solution of Starr's murder in a very efficient manner."

He will not return to New York until he is summoned by Chief District Attorney, Wyman declared.

GAS VICTIM IS SAVED BY CALL

A telephone call from her husband saved the life of Mrs. Leah H. DeNoyer, 25 of Watertown, Mass., today.

Mrs. DeNoyer was in a semi-conscious state at her home, 400 West Main st., when a gas leak was discovered. A fireman, called by the house from Boston, lifted the receiver and mumbled a few incoherent words before she collapsed to the floor.

Police found Mrs. DeNoyer nearly unconscious and resuscitated her. She was taken to Newton Hospital for further treatment. Four gas jets were open in the house, police said.

WOMAN GIVES POLICE TIP ON STARR'S LAST PARTY

chaudroned Starr and a wealthy male companion on a tour of Europe, and that he had accompanied Starr in the company of the same man in the afternoon of the disappearance.

4—Admission by Mass. Court to authorities that the "important documents" found in a search of the Fairfield home Friday were laws letters of a recent date from address in New York and New York, who are being sought for questioning by District Attorney Edwin A. Edwards, in charge of the investigation.

5—Statement from authorities that they were seeking an elderly woman said to have accompanied Starr in his last days, a strong influence on Starr's life; a girl reported to have been with Starr on the day of her disappearance, and two men said to have been seen with her shortly before her disappearance.

POLICE TRACE CALL

Of these new developments most importance is attached by Dist. Atty. Edwards to the phone call of the mysterious woman who kept a rendezvous with Starr on the day she dropped from sight. Shortly after the anonymous call was received Inspector Harold King announced the call had been traced and the speaker's name and address were known. After it was located the woman, young, pretty and Starr's dinner companion the day of her disappearance, was away from her home one week-end house party, three friends of Starr's who were at the time. Starr's headquarters to comb the streets in search of Starr, a 30 mile for the location of the house party.

The summer colonies of Long Beach, Longwood and Atlantic were to be bases for the three parties of searchers, King said. The body of the "party girl" was washed ashore at Long Beach at 8:30 a. m. Monday, June 8. The autopsy record showed she had been dead about 48 hours. The medical examiner's investigation also disclosed, however, that Starr had eaten a meal six hours before her death. Her mysterious disappearance at her last party definitely located

SEARCH FOR COTTAGE

Working backward through the accounts of the authorities, they are proceeding on the theory that Starr was willing to the cottage somewhere around Friday midnight.

In view of the woman's statements and of evidence already in possession of the authorities, they are proceeding on the theory that Starr was willing to the cottage somewhere around Friday midnight.

A minute search of the environs of Long Beach for the cottage where she kept her fatal appointment was in progress today.

Although the anonymous telephone was believed to be of primary importance to the quest for the four other people mentioned in connection with her last days, the two men with whom she was reported seen during the weekend of her death are known by name. Inspector Harold King announced that they were sought to appear at a scheduled press conference at which he had promised to make public excerpts from Starr's diary, including the initials attached to written records of the dead girl's affairs of the heart.

It was revealed today through Starr's luncheon companion, and the Boston Evening American learned, that Starr, during the last six years of her life, was the recipient of three cash payments—one of $400, another of $1,000 and a third of $10,000.

RICH MAN SOUGHT

The man or men who bought the exotic party girl's love—or her silence—also furnished the objective of a thorough police search. It was learned that the hunt was directed in particular at one man, and that with it prominent. Why Starr had turned to him for money to the slain madcap during her last six years is only a matter of official circles.

Goldstein, held as a fugitive from charges of wife desertion and grand larceny in California, turned the manhunt in still another direction.

Several years ago, he said, he

SAW MAN AGAIN

Then, he said, he recalled having met the couple on the street in New York, and that he had seen Starr and the man on the morning of the day on which Starr disappeared. He believes he was one of the last who knew Starr to see her on the day she vanished from her home.

Although authorities at first favored Goldstein's story a checkup on the movements of the man named as Starr's companion on the motor trip, revealed that he had been abroad at the time specified by Goldstein.

Secondly, in importance only to the slain girl's diary were the newly discovered love letters. Of these records it was hoped to gain their hopes of reconstructing the last few months of Starr's life on evidence given to them by the writers, many of whom are sought since they had been identified from the diary letters.

SUICIDE HINTED

While the full strength of Dist. Atty. Edwards' staff was thrown into the probe, a new friend of the "party girl"—Starr's Fairbanks, said to be heir to a $10,000 fortune—was forward with a letter to him that he believed her suicide.

"I had heard from her on Monday," he said, "and she told me she had taken her life. I believe she committed suicide."

"She often seemed to be depressed," he said, "and I often saw her as the type of girl who wanted to get married. She told me that all men were deceivers."

"I had heard from her on Monday," he said, "and she told me she had taken her life. I believe she committed suicide."

RETURN TO JURY

As a result of this telegram, Elizabeth, mother of the dead girl, is to be returned to the Norfolk Hotel, and while she is in the city, she will be kept under the watchful eye of her father and stepmother, who are "equals" in an attempt to identify someone there with a familiar face.

When Elizabeth goes again before the Nassau County grand jury, as is expected because of her change in her story, made on Saturday, it is probable that the two telegrams will accompany her.

Inspector King, the state admitted that Starr had told her she was going out with the man on the day she disappeared.

NEAR COLLAPSE

Inspector King, on leaving the Fairfield home at 3:30 a. m. with Dist. Atty. Littleton, declared that Starr had "over and over the day."

"I don't know as I have," he replied. "Asked if he had unlearned any other documents, he said he did not."

"Not today, I have nothing of new value now, as a matter of fact. None whatever."

Inspector King revealed that Starr had been in the verge of collapse from strain over her daughter's strange death.

At one time last night, during the grilling of the family and when Fairfield stepped outside for a breath of air and a moment of relief from the questioning, Mrs. Fairfield was heard to say:

"I'm tired I could faint."

A number of witnesses will go before the Nassau County grand jury tomorrow and among them, it is believed, will be the prominent Boston politician who has been frequently mentioned in connection with the Starr-Fairfull case.

STARR'S LAST PARTY

STARR'S SISTER FAHER DENIES

N PROWIDENCE STARR'S WILD PARTIES

LAST WEEK

By JOHN E. NOONAN
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

New York, June 15 (AP)—The silence of Stanley E. Fairfull, stepfather of Starr Faithfull, former Boston beauty, was broken for the first time early today when he talked exclusively to this reporter at the end of a six-hour search of his home at 12 St. Luke's pl., by detectives.

The interview with Fairfull brought the charge from him that the life of Starr has been filled by tongue in the street, and a key of Starr would be completed by the true life story of the beauty whose brutal body was found on the sands of Long Beach, N. J., a week ago today.

"If I were not for the constant attention the entire family must give to the authorities, the life of Starr would be completed by now," said Fairfull when he emerged from the house following the search and grilling.

He handed to this reporter a handwritten statement, signed by him, which said:

"Mrs. Fairfull and myself are determined to have the true story of Starr revealed to all the people who have been reading about her."

"This character is the exact opposite of that which has been portrayed."

"Practically all the stories told of her life are faulty and have been told in fact."

"The press will soon have a proven account of Starr's life, in which we all are now working."

"Mr. Wynne (the dead girl's father) agrees with me in the means being used in the presentation of these facts."

"I don't know what a sponsored life story of Starr, as the family knew her, is being written."

"I don't," he answered. "I have been told that Starr never lived the life that has been portrayed in the last week."

No other explanation than the boat ride quite fits the fact that the life of Starr Faithfull has been depicted in the papers as a life of dissipation and debauchery.

If they were left on a boat, in all probability none ever will be cast up to the sands of Long Island—for they have gone to the famous locker of Dave Jones, viated perhaps with the same wealth that was to have the punishment for Starr Faithfull's own.

But, you ask, was this not a homicide? Kinsman is a felony, one of the most heinous known to our law. Any act that results in death is the commission of a felony case, the first degree.

Even if Mr. Y and Mr. Z, committing the felony of kidnapping for Mr. X, were able to establish that they fought like demons to prevent the "Goodtime Girl" from throwing herself into the sea, they would need a super-Clarence Darrow to escape the chair for any ordinary jury.

Just how much of the facts that fit in with this story Stanley E. Fairfull, the foster-father, and Elizabeth, Starr's mother, can tell, the girl who had no youth, who must have grown from a mere child into a sophisticated woman—she is 39 now—just how much of these facts do they really know.

CHAPTER FOUR

In 1925 there appeared in the candle-lit resorts of New York's Greenwich Village a new and intriguing figure—a smartly dressed, auburn-haired girl with haunted blue eyes, who sat for a while each evening, solitary, in the midst of the unbridled gaiety in one ultra-Bohemian rendezvous or another.

The Village, lured to the unusual, still speculated. A Parisian, debauchee slumming? Obviously not; they came in groups—giggling troupes of flappers acquired by callow lads, likely to become vainglorious after a few drinks.

This girl was alone—always alone—and she smoked endlessly, drank deeply. Often, when she left, there was a noticeable unsteadiness in her walk.

In the code of the mad crew of pleasure-seekers whose hunting ground is the pseudo-artistic colony of the Village, nothing is unconventional but conventional. Strange men, exhilarated by liquor and lured by the brooding girl's exotic beauty, lured to her table, besought her to join them.

Before long the barrier of reserve with which the strange beauty surrounded herself no longer sufficed to repel the insistent curiosity of the "regulars."

"Yielded to CALL"

There came a night when, sick with her hours of introspection and befuddled with liquor, she yielded to the oft-repeated invitations of a riotous crowd of merry-makers in one of the smoky cellar retreats of the "emancipated."

So came Starr Wyman Faithfull, whose background should have held her fast in the bonds of cold and impeccable convention.

Starr's destiny was upon her. Her brief but intense love-life started—toward the fatal climax.

HOOVER ON WAY WEST MEETS G. O. P. HEADS

En Route With President Hoover to Indianapolis, June 15 (AP)—President Hoover conferred with Governor Connelley of West Virginia and other Republican leaders of that state as he moved into the Middle West to open a three days' speaking tour at Indianapolis.

The West Virginia Republican leaders, including Senator Hatfield and national committee members, Mrs. Leana Lowe Yost and Walter S. Hallahan, were welcomed aboard the special train at Charleston. They traveled as far as Huntington, visiting the President in a specially arranged conference car.

Mr. Hoover showed an eagerness to talk with the party chieftains of West Virginia, which elected a Democratic Senator in the last election. He was interested, too, in learning of economic conditions in that mining state.

The train slowed down going through the smaller towns and crowds usually were out. A band from Montgomery, W. Va., played as the train crept through.

GLAD PEOPLE WORKING

Mr. Hoover presented Mrs. Hoover flowers at Charleston. Speaking at the West Virginia capital the President thanked the citizens for the welcome and said it was "inspiring to see the American people at work."

Hallahan said after his conference with the chief executive that he had assured him that West Virginia would be for him for re-election and reelection.

"I told the President that the feeling in West Virginia was that he had done all he could do in this time of distress and that it is no longer felt that he has been careless and inefficient," he said.

Mr. Hoover spoke in Indianapolis tonight.

Mr. Hoover is pursuing a path that leads into the states of Ohio and Illinois, which will then deliver many Republican men in the Democratic in the congressional election last year.

TO HARDING'S TOWN

His trip follows the boom for his re-nomination secured by Chairman Fess of the Republican National Committee and Cabinet members. Tomorrow the President travels to Marion, O., to dedicate the memorial to Warren G. Harding. He will be joined at those exercises by Calvin Coolidge. Leaving immediately after the ceremony, he will go to Columbus to review a parade of G. A. R. veterans and to visit the Ohio legislative assembly before boarding the special train for an overnight trip to Springfield, Ill., to be the guest of Gov. Emmerson. He will visit the Illinois legislative assembly before re-dedicating the tomb of Abraham Lincoln.

Marion All Set for Hoover Honor to Harding

Marion, O., June 12 (AP)—Marion was decked out in red, white and blue today awaiting the influx of thousands of visitors who will honor the memory of Warren G. Harding tomorrow.

Only final details remained to be arranged for President Hoover's dedication of the marble tomb which holds the bodies of the late President and his wife.

The ceremonies will be broadcast over Columbus and National Broadcasting Companies' networks starting at 1 P. M. p. m. (C. S. T.).

Mr. Hoover then will go to Columbus to review the parade of the state G. A. R. He will not be able to attend the luncheon for Calvin Coolidge and other dignitaries.

Big Business Urged to Balk Soviet Plan

New York, June 13 (AP)—A 15-year plan of industrial stabilization to offset the Soviet five-year plan is urged by James W. Gerard, former ambassador to Germany. Mr. Gerard has written 300 business and labor organizations asking them to meet in an American industrial congress to create "Democratic leadership" in industry.

The plan is not devised by Daniel Wolf, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor.

Two Days of Perfect Weather Promised

At least two more days of perfect weather were promised for Boston today by the weather man. A storm to the north threatened for a time to bring this way but was driven out to sea by westerly winds that will continue to prevail tonight and tomorrow.

Temperatures ranged in the 70's today with prospects of them remaining the same tomorrow.

Middlebury Gives Willard a Degree

Middlebury, Vt., June 13 (AP)—Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, returned to his native state today to receive an honorary doctor of law degree from Middlebury College.

He advised a graduate class of 130 not to be discouraged if they were forced to alter their original plans after leaving college because of present conditions.

Here's How! Among the ads in today's Classified Ad Section there are answers to the five questions below. All you have to do is find the ads containing those answers, write the number and the answers on a slip of paper, and mail immediately in the "Hidden Question Editor," Classified Department, Boston American, 1 Winthrop St., Boston, Mass.

The first FIVE correct answers received will receive five COMPLEMENTARY TICKETS to Loew's State Theatre... the next five correct will receive complimentary prizes of equal value. Names of those winning awards will be published in the Classified Ad Section and tickets mailed to winners.

REMEMBER... A NEW CONTEST EVERY DAY... ANYONE MAY WIN!

You need not be a subscriber to the Boston American in order to participate; copies may be consulted at the Public Library or at the office of the newspaper.

THE QUESTIONS:

1. Who has an exhibit at West End?
2. Where is the house located that carries a first mortgage of $2500, and who has it for sale?
3. How will you receive a table free if you purchase a time?
4. What is the address of an advertiser who pays an ad on pages?
5. Who is in from home on Farm property?

WE LIKE nothing better than to induce hard-to-convince smokers to switch to Camels for just one day.

For we know that after they have made a real test, it will be mighty hard to lure them away from this famous brand.

It's not easy to smoke parched-dry cigarettes once you have known the delights of perfectly conditioned Camels.

After inhaling the cool, soft fragrance of the Camel Blend of choice Turkish and mellow Domestic tobaccos protected by the Humidor Pack, your throat protests against the bite and sting and harsh hot-ness that comes from crumbly, dry tobacco.

No matter where you pick them up, in any land, in any climate, Camels are the same fresh, factory-prime cigarettes.

For the Humidor Pack of moisture-proof Cellophane air-seals all the flavor in and keeps out weather, dust and germs.

This is no mere advertising story. It is a recitation of fact that has made the whole country conscious of a new superiority in Camels.

If you are hard to convince, won't you switch to Camels for just one day? Then leave them—if you can.

Tune in CAMEL QUARTER HOUR featuring Morton Downey and Tony Wons

BEACON HILL

—by Betty Alden

THIS IS GOING TO BE A BUSY WEEK FOR US TRYING to get around to the various social affairs that take place within the next seven days.

First and very important is Betty Saltonstall's wedding to August Belmont which takes place at her father's country estate in Topfield today. Betty would make a paragraph well worth reading all by herself, she is pretty, popular, petite and peppy, one of that snappy quirkiness who came out last year and were among the most beautiful and witty.

Phyllis Ellsworth, now Mrs. C. Douglas Dillon, who will be in Miss Betty's bridal procession, was another of this group, Sally Sprague, whose marriage to Ogden White will take place the first week in August. Winifred Thorndike, whose engagement has not been announced as yet, and Eloise Weld, who will marry young Elkins on the 22d.

Socially speaking, Betty has secured the prize and when she goes to New York to live, she will have her friends as neighbors, almost, as they are all marrying New York men except Miss Weld, who will live in Elkins Park, Pa., not too far from the city.

As we are driving down to Topfield now, we will leave the rest of the story until tomorrow.

Harvard '06 Grads to Have Big Time

TODAY IS 'SO "FATHERS AND SONS" DAY, CLASS of '06, at Harvard. They are having a big time at the Essex Country Club, while the "wives and daughters" are being entertained by a committee appointed to entertain them at the Eastern Yacht Club, and "never the twain shall meet," not today.

Tuesday is class day at Harvard and the festivities at Cambridge commence. There will also be a reception by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Amory of Readville for the members of the class of '06, who are holding their 25th reunion, and from what I hear the best boys with young ideas are going to have a time.

ON WEDNESDAY THE EAST-BERN HORSE CLUB RACE MEETING takes place at The Country Club and what a round of interest is taking place there. Mrs. George Saltonstall will be giving a large luncheon to her friends and acquaintances.

On Thursday Miss Mrs. G. West is bringing a number of his house guests, and if the day is fine it means that well over a hundred horse devotees will participate in the rich and rare hospitality of the West.

MRS. HOLDEN McGINLEY is having a supper and dance in the afternoon for her daughter, Miss Elizabeth, and her friends. Miss Barbara Greenough, over twenty-five hundred invitations have been sent out and the supper will be served from 5 until 8, and many of the guests will come from the races at Brookline.

Miss Marion Dalton will direct the games and a number of this year's buds will attend.

IN THE EVENING there will take place at the Copple-Park a dinner dance for the Harvard class of 1906 and also a dinner at the Harvard Club.

THURSDAY IS HARVARD COMMENCEMENT. Of course, the various clubs will have their spreads on Tuesday after class day, and invitations are out for the Hasty Pudding at the club house. The senior members of the D. U. are scattering at the club house immediately following the Stadium exercises on class day and the Porcellana and A. D. are having a musical spread on the same day. It will not be at Back Hall, we hear, as has been the custom for 100 years.

Boat Race Friday

FRIDAY IS THE HARVARD-YALE boat race in New London and the crowds are already planning to go down on their boats and watch the race. Because of the office, we heard it was going to be held at 8:30 p. m. This will be a novelty and should be very exciting to the spectators.

THE EASTERN HORSE CLUB held its annual dinner on Saturday and if you had Wednesday, you may try your luck.

THE DE PIETREFF-DANIELS wedding takes place on Thursday and the bride and groom are having the wedding dinner at the Hoonewick Club at Topfield.

SATURDAY WILL BE THE date of three more June bride, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Converse to Mr. William Leonard Stevens, Jr., of St. John, N. H., and Miss Chapel Cambridge, Miss Lincoln Chapel at Christ Church, Cambridge, and Miss Janet Rathwell to Mr. George Jay Dunham, Jr., of All View, Marshfield, Mass.

SOCIETY NOTES

SEVERAL IMPORTANT ENGAGEMENTS are announced by the respective families, including that of Miss Anne Wally Grant, daughter of Mrs. Arthur E. Grant, to Mr. Hugh Pope, son of Mrs. Arthur Pope of Cambridge.

TODAY IS ALSO THE DATE for another wedding, that of Miss Elizabeth Howe Donham to Mr. John H. Donham, Jr., of New York.

ANOTHER ENGAGEMENT of interest to Boston and New York people is that of Miss Mary C. Coe, daughter of Mrs. William A. Coe, to Mr. John H. Donham, Jr., of New York.

THE MARRIAGE OF Miss Elizabeth Howe Donham to Mr. John H. Donham, Jr., of New York, is a small cousin of the bride, Miss Jean Saltonstall, and Miss Josephine Murray.

Miss Saltonstall, known to her friends as "Betty," wears white mouseline-de-silk with a cap and veil of tulle and will carry white spray orchids. The maid of honor is Miss Jean Saltonstall, and Miss Josephine Murray.

Iced Tea Ideal for Summer Drink

From Martha Lee's Sunday Morning Broadcast Over Station WJAB
Iced tea on the menu for my favorite restaurant formerly up there in the summer season and that same tea, by the way, is the chief drawing card of this particular place. For the tea is freshly made for each customer, instead of being poured from a pitcher which a might originally have held the proper blend but towards the last gives forth a pale, attenuated apology for tea.

One of our next brides has been written in asking for directions to properly prepare this favorite summer beverage and so, as I think there may be hundreds of others equally interested, let's take time today to consider iced tea in its perfection.

OF CHOICE BLEND

The tea the young lady is using in the picture today is blended entirely from the choicest growths of Ceylon, India and Java, and every leaf is carefully protected in the metal foil packing. This tea is absolutely pure, delicious, full of strength and fragrant. And right now, when so many of us must count our pennies closely, trying to make one thin dollar go as far as two, isn't it comforting to think that we can enjoy our refreshing cups of tea comfortable in the knowledge that it is the world's most economical drink? One pound of these good tea leaves yields up nearly 500 cups of tea.

And now, little June bride, please make for the nearest grocer and let the following directions for iced tea be recipe No. 1 in your brand new Martha Lee Recipe Scrap.

PERFECT ICED TEA.
Iced tea is made by the same method as hot tea, except that twice the quantity of tea is used. Use absolutely fresh-drawn and fresh boiling water and be sure that it's bubbling merrily. Tea made with water boiling below the boiling point loses much of its flavor. Use an earthen or heat-proof glass teapot. Tea also has metallic tastes which detract from its deliciousness and flavor. First the teapot should be rinsed with boiling water. Second, for iced tea, put 2 cups of tea in the pot for each cup of water and an extra one for the pot. Next, pour the tea, fresh boiling water on the tea leaves, cover and let steep for 8 or 10 minutes. Then pour into a large hot pot. While still hot pour the tea into tall glasses filled 1/2 with ice cubes or chopped ice and serve immediately. Mix sugar add to the food value of tea, but many prefer lemon, and some like the spiced sugar. A lemon slice slit and perched atop the glass gives an attractive touch of color to the drink.

making and tell me if you see any improvement? Perhaps you are making your tea almost exactly according to these directions and yet not quite. Perhaps you don't warm the teapot first—and this is very necessary. Or perhaps you don't let the tea steep long enough, or too long; or you may not be quite careful enough to see that the water is freshly boiling when you pour it on the leaves. Each of these small matters help make the difference between a weak, unsatisfactory concoction and real tea. Remember that tea tannin, the least desirable element in tea, that gives it its bitterness and this is evaporated only when the tea is over-steeped or boiled.

New Frocks for Old Friends

If the proof of the pudding is in the eating, you can be sure that the proof of selling with zest is proper seasoning, and the proof of proper seasoning is the brand of spices used. In choosing your spices, clove, paprika, nutmeg, celery salt, pepper and what-not, it certainly pays to be particular. And when I went spice shopping with discrimination last week I was delighted to find some of my oldest spice friends in smart new metal paper cartons. These new metal frocks instead of in the familiar paper cartons. These new metal frocks instead of in the familiar paper cartons. These new metal frocks instead of in the familiar paper cartons.

Banana Recipe Prizes Are Awarded

Any one who has ever seen 4687 written recipes all spread out, waiting to be read, sorted and judged, has some idea of the conscientious work that's being done by the judging committee in the Banana Recipe Contest, sponsored by the Fruit Dispatch Company.

Every single recipe was read, checked for duplicates and carefully considered from the standpoint of originality, reasonable economy, and ease of preparation. The committee was surely tempted to forget that it was the recipe alone that counted and not the attractive bindings that jacketed so many of the entries. We didn't know there were so many artists among Martha Lee's club members, nor so many talented cooks.

But what you're all interested in, I know, is who gets the prizes, so without further delay, we'll announce the winners, with heartiest congratulations.

First Prize—Mrs. E. Fenton Smith, 3 Sophie Ave., Clifton, for her Banana Refrigerator Cake.
Second Prize—Mrs. R. E. Stenevick, 2 Baker St., Dorchester.
Third Prize—Mrs. M. B. Brown, 119 E. 1st St., Boston.
Fourth Prize—Mrs. M. B. Brown, 119 E. 1st St., Boston.
Fifth Prize—Mrs. M. B. Brown, 119 E. 1st St., Boston.
Sixth Prize—Mrs. M. B. Brown, 119 E. 1st St., Boston.
Seventh Prize—Mrs. M. B. Brown, 119 E. 1st St., Boston.
Eighth Prize—Mrs. M. B. Brown, 119 E. 1st St., Boston.

Tenth Prize—Mrs. M. B. Brown, 119 E. 1st St., Boston.

Peppy Mustard Adds Zest to Many Dishes

Remember how surprising it was when we first heard about spreading chop, steaks, and what-nots with mustard before cooking? And how we wondered just what the result would be until we tasted the answer to our question in the fact that never had we tasted more deliciously flavored foods?

Today thousands of housewives are cooking their chops, steaks, meat loaves, omelets and many other foods by the method first originated by famous chefs in combination with their favorite prepared mustard.

The famous Alfred W. McCann says that the reason he recommends the generous use of pure prepared mustard is because "pure mustard increases the digestibility of all meats. It makes more flavorful and appetizing such foods as baked beans, tomatoes, spinach, green salads, potato salads, spaghetti, etc."

You're probably used to mustard for years on your table, to spread on meats and sandwiches. Now try it in your kitchen for use in cooking. When broiling or roasting meats, spread a layer on top. Let it dry a few minutes, then turn and spread on the bottom.

FIREWORKS TO OPEN JUNE 17 CELEBRATION

Fireworks and fireworks at the Bunker Hill playground tomorrow night, will usher in Charleston's celebration of the 196th anniversary of the Battle of Bunker Hill.

On Wednesday, Bunker Hill Park will be a marsh for the children, with the Bunker Hill Monument grounds, where 10,000 bricks of ice cream and 10,000 loaves of bread will be distributed, swimming races, and in the afternoon a military and musical parade, with more than 7,000 in the ranks.

The prominent in National, State, church and military affairs will be in speakers.

Bunker Hill Post No. 26, American Legion, conduct their first night before the Bunker Hill Monument Memorial Auditorium on June 17.

At 8 o'clock, the Bunker Hill Council, K. of C., will hold its 25th annual "night before" banquet in the clubhouse on Bunker Hill. Grand Knight James H. Hand will be the toastmaster. Congressman Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, Rev. George F. Kettell, D. National Chaplain of the American Legion, Judge Charles H. Sullivan, State Deputy Joseph M. Kirby and Rev. Fr. James J. Corbett, C. M., will be among the speakers.

Bunker Hill Council Chorale of 30 voices will sing.

The community banquet, under the auspices of the City of Boston, will be held in the Charleston Armory. City Councillor Thomas M. Green is honorary chairman of the celebration and Charles Casler, chairman of the celebration committee.

Prof. Daniel W. O'Donoghue of Georgetown University, will be the principal speaker. Others will be Governor Ely, Mayor Curley and Mayor David I. Walsh. Entertainment will be provided by talent from Boston theaters.

After the banquet, the dancers, a guinea, led by Mayor Curley, will march to the Bunker Hill grounds, where the mayor will start a display of fireworks. There will be no bonfire this year.

Abraham Lincoln Post, Veterans of the World War, will have a chicken house, entertainment and buffet lunch at their headquarters in Memorial Hall, Green at.

In of Cambridge will preside. "Sally" is senior sister at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross and is next president of the Cathedral Club.

FRESH TEAM INVITED
City Councillor "Tommy" Green of Charleston has invited the Gladiators football team, champions of Ireland, who are now visiting in Boston, to be the guests of the city at the annual "night before" banquet in Charleston Armory tomorrow evening.

The coming campaign for City Council in Ward 2, Southbury, promises to be one of the most exciting ever held in that district. Harold V. Des Roches of 1st Colonial st., who at one time was the active in Democratic politics, is an avowed candidate for the office. He expects to receive the endorsement of the Roxbury Board of Trade and of the Good Government Association. Harold says he will defeat City Councillor Leo Foster, present incumbent, who now seeks re-election.

WALSH IS APPOINTED
Mayor Curley has appointed Frank C. Walsh of 89 Dix st., Dorchester, a gateman-tolman in the city service for a period of three months. He starts work next Friday.

GOODE IS REINSTATED
John J. Goode, of 179 Centre st., Southbury, has been reinstated as temporary clerk in the water division of the city public works department. He resigned that position in June 30, 1929.

HOME TOWN BOOSTER
In the recording of the contract for the state war memorial building on Mt. Greylock by the memorial commission, Dr. W. C. DeWitt, secretary to the Governor, was recently disappointed. DeWitt wanted to see the decision made of Chester granite instead of the Quincy product. He claims that the granite from his home town is unequalled.

CHARLESTON MISSES ELY
For more than a generation John Charleston, State House barber, has shaved every governor. So far during the present administration he has drawn a blank. Governor Curley usually has his shave at his hotel.

ADVERTISING IS FORCED TO END HARD TIMES

New York, June 15 (AP)—Visualizing advertising as a tonic for ailing business, Gilbert T. Hodges, president of the Advertising Federation of America, today urged that it get back on a full-time working basis and help restore the nation's buying power.

Bouncing the keynotes of the federation's convention, which opened today, Mr. Hodges asserted: "Advertising must release our people from the fetters of fear and from apprehension that jobs are endangered."

"By so doing, it will turn back the enormous buying power of the American people."

Mr. Hodges is a member of the executive board of the New York Sun.

WISCONSIN PROPHETS
"Advertising must fight to the last ditch those efforts of the false prophets to turn us back to the dark ages of discomfort and penny pinching."

"We must dispel the fear of bogeyman and restore confidence. The first step in that accomplishment is to stop negative and destructive advertising."

"We must stop advertising loss of jobs and lowering of wages."

WARNS OF WAGE CUTS
Wage-cutting is not the solution; it only makes a serious situation worse, he said.

Dr. Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, and Kenneth Collins, executive vice-president of R. H. Macy Co., were other speakers.

At a luncheon greetings were extended by Governor Roosevelt, Mayor Walker and Charles E. Murphy, president of the Advertising Club of New York.

Murphy warned against reducing wages.

Lynn Man Sought 13 Years Is Found at Bar of Justice

Probation Officer Charles Colby of Lynn has a remarkable memory. Anyway, Ira P. White of Malden, that city, will testify to his sharpness.

White appeared in Lynn district court today on a drunkenness charge and when Colby looked the prisoners over, he thought White looked familiar, as he looked up his "outstanding warrants" and found he had been looking for White for 13 years for violating the conditions of his probation on a non-support charge.

Judge Reese fled the drunkenness charge, and deferred hearing on the other complaint.

Wages on any broad scale as has been widely discussed.

TRAIN HITS AUTO THREE UNHURT

Hingham, June 15 (AP)—Three residents of Truro, N. S., narrowly escaped injury today when the first section of the Owl express of the New Haven railroad, bound from Boston to New York, plowed through their auto.

The occupants of the automobile were Donald B. Hamilton, 25, his sister, Irene, 20, and Douglas Miller, 28, all of Truro, N. S.

The three were driving from the home of a friend at Norton to Hamilton's brother's home at East Providence, R. I. At Allamore they missed the highway and followed a side road, which dead ended at the New Haven railroad tracks.

They drove onto the tracks before seeing the dead end and had just time to leap from the car as the express swung around a curve. The auto was destroyed.

Library Counterfeits Shakespeare Books Worth $2,500,000

San Martin, Cal., June 15 (AP)—A counterfeiting plant is in operation here for popular and scholarly enlightenment. It is the laboratory of the Henry F. Huntington Library and art gallery.

The latest, and second in a proposed long series of counterfeits, made its appearance recently—a facsimile reproduction of "The Tragicall History of Hamlet, Prince of Denmark," from the large quarto of 1602.

The original little quarto of 64 pages is worth more than many other libraries. There are but two known copies extant. One in the British Museum, the other among 165 volumes of Shakespeare, embracing every first edition of the plays, with the exception of "Timon Andronicus," a collection worth $2,500,000, on the shelves of the Huntington library.

THIS IS LIFE

OFF TO THE SHORE TO TURN PAGAN AGAIN, WEATHER OR NO!

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

LAST WEEK I understood how a pagan feels. A pagan is, by definition, a person who lives in the country and who, therefore, worships natural forces, the old gods of weather and circumstance.

We in the city do not know anything about weather. And I am by birth, habit and inclination a city dweller. All civilization is the product of the city, of course, and most of our social misunderstandings arise between the city mind and the country or village mind. Usually the difficulty is no more than a matter of time-lag, but a time-lag if long enough can make trouble. Even the vices of the city are essentially civilized and not at all pagan vices.

But the city-bred teacher has, perforce, to get out of the city for three or four months of the year. Like the garment worker's less is a seasonal occupation, and there is no quite so useless in the city as a teacher when school doesn't keep. If you are an athletic sort of teacher you can run a summer camp. If you are an ambitious or acquisitive teacher you can teach in summer school or attend summer school. If you are none of these things there isn't much else you can do. So at least you can cease to add to the number of the unemployed, and get out where you can raise your own vegetables and catch your own fish and where—theoretically—the cost of living is cheaper.

I say theoretically because there are exceptions. There is a fish market in my seaside town, where on July 1 flounder automatically ceases to be flounder and becomes flét of sole—at a higher price. And if our vegetables are a little high, we are told that naturally this must be the case since they have to be sent up from Boston! The reason why motor gas is higher I do not remember, but it is undoubtedly valid.

Makes You a Pagan Again

But I was talking about weather. I have come to the conclusion that my annual trek from the city to what in these days of automobiles passes for the country has a profound influence on the weather. I have known the annual packing to go on in an exhausting heat which, the moment we arrive at the summer home, disappears in an east wind which blows without a letup for days. Last week I left Cambridge in beautiful weather. Later that afternoon we unloaded under heavy clouds and the first wind-driven drops of rain.

The authorities tell us that it rained 75 hours. I do not doubt it in the least. It felt more like a hundred.

In the city it wouldn't have mattered. If it is too chilly in June, you can always scrape up a few shovels-full of coal, or even a little kindling at a pinch, and take the chill off. Or if you are lucky enough to live in an apartment you can telephone down to the janitor to turn on the oil. And the law says that he must if you insist. You can make it hot for your landlord if he doesn't make it hot for you!

But away from street cars and subways and warm buildings and all the rest of it, you become pagan again. You realize, in the words of the old hymn, that we must have weather, whether or not.

The weather gets into your bones and into your spirit, as it did into those of the old country-men (pagans) and heath-men (heathens). And their gods become your gods.

Like Primitive Little Huts

In a prolonged spell of rain the summer cottage you have just moved into is not unlike one of those primitive little huts between the forest and the sea, back in the gray dawn of history. It stands on the edge of the rocks and shakes in the nor'easter that never lets up for a moment. On the rocks below the breakers foam and pound; the sky hangs low and leaden, swept by racing clouds. The garden plots are deep and soggy pools.

Inside there is the general impression of a one-room hut in which all the clan and all the animals are gathered for warmth and comfort. Dark and smoky little dens they must have been with the fire on the central hearth and the little hole in the roof. There is no hole in our roof, since—thank Heaven?—it doesn't leak, but the smoke is thick enough to satisfy the most primitive and prehistoric man. Long dimmed oil stoves have a way of not warming up too brightly to their task. And the chimney, as wet, and the wood, brought in from an out-of-door shed, even wetter. And from neither is there heat enough to toast a marsh-mallow, let alone a family. Even the dog, a pampered city-bred lady, gets her paws and her feathery tail and her long ears soaked on her brief and gingery excursions out of doors, and is very unhappy and tells you all about it.

And everything is piled in the one room—trunks and bags and boxes and disconnected electric lamps and kitchen equipment. For, after all, if you must be away from the delights of the city for four months, you can at least try to be civilized. You can't unpack the boxes and put them on the porch, which is as wet as the sea itself. And you can't make the beds because you can't unpack the boxes. Your last hot meal seems very, very far away—and you hope the oil stove isn't going to lie down on you altogether.

Thanksgiving to Old Man Sun

In two respects only you are one up on primitive man. There are electric lights gleaming dimly through the fog wherever you forget to remove the bulbs last summer. And at the end of a telephone wire is a store which can send out a web-footed Ford through the freshets and bring you marvelous foods in tins and glass. You do not have to crouch on the edge of a wave-swept rock and catch codfish in your bare hands.

Otherwise you feel very prehistoric. You know just how probably Arboreal felt in his wattle hut after the fourth day of rain. You want to build a little fire on the floor and kill a sheep (i.e., sacrifice a can of tongue) and sing something, very long and sorrowful, to the gods of the rain and the northeast wind and the fog and the night and the cold. For you feel, in your shivering bones you feel, their power and importance in the scheme of things.

And a day or two later you want to go leaping and galumphing barefoot over the wet grass, shouting a strong, wheezy, and thanksgiving to Old Man Sun—father of all life—hot, bright and holy!

That is why it sometimes does you good to get out of the city.

BOYS BORROW' PARKED CAR FOR JANT

Young Pilot Makes Round Trip from Lynn to Revere in Heavy Traffic

When better drivers are made, little Leo Hay and just as little Joe Ghringhell will answer to their names, but the two seven-year-old boys were back home today, sadder and wiser, to await the passing of many years.

Leo and Joe, restless youngsters of Light St., Lynn, three Lynn and Revere into a furor yesterday when they picked an automobile and drove it through all the mass of Sunday's jammed traffic from Lynn to Revere Beach and back.

NO DRIVER VISIBLE. With their heads hardly elevated enough to give them vision over the roof of their seven-year-olds threaded the coach automobile through heavy traffic, avoiding collisions by inches and through the skill of more expert drivers.

Meanwhile, in back of them and far in front, policemen were scanning the stream of traffic for the youthful auto snitchers, as a result of reports from many drivers that a car without a visible driver was making driving uncomfortable on the Lynn-Revere boulevard.

The entire street force of both police departments was assigned to the hunt, while in Lynn, Motor-cycle Officers Daniel Hogan and John Kane whizzed out along the highway and byways, hoping to pick up the strange car.

They were successful, but not before Leo and Joe had managed to get all the way to Revere Beach, again without mishap, Leo driving.

PARENTAL DISCIPLINE. Officers Hogan and Kane came upon the two boys when they had returned to Lynn.

"Can you stop it?" cried Hogan as he roared alongside.

"No," replied Leo, and to prove it he threw the clutch and jammed on his brakes.

The dazed officers picked the boys from the car and took them to Lynn police headquarters, from where they were taken in charge by their parents for a further bit of action behind closed doors.

The car is owned by Emil Chasen of 32 Wenden St., Lynn, and was parked in front of his home.

TRAFFIC JAMS MEAN NOTHING TO TINY AUTO WIZARDS

LEO HAY JOSEPH GHRINGHELL. Leo Hay and Joseph Ghringhell, 7-year-old Lynn youngsters, since they pilfered yesterday, the lad drove through a mass believe the age limit for auto drivers should be lowered to 10. 4 traffic from Lynn to Revere and back again without any clue them. Hardly big enough to peer over the side of a man—ign of a crash before police picked them up. (Staff photo.)

YOUTH FOILS DEATH DROP

RICHARD NICKERSON. AMBROSE GRIFITHS. Ambrose J. Griffiths, 13, of Jacques St., Somerville, is a hero today. Ambrose Griffiths, 13, Is (ried to the Ground as He Clutches Falling Child

Two-year-old Richard Nickerson of Jacques street, Somerville, was saved from injury or death today in a 20-foot fall when a 13-year-old neighbor caught him in an unusual act of bravery.

The hero, Ambrose J. Griffiths, was playing in the street when he saw the Nickerson boy toppling from the second floor window of his home.

He rushed over, braced himself for the impact and caught the boy in his arms, the force of the impact throwing both to the ground.

The Nickerson boy was shaken up by the fall but his rescuer showed no apparent effect.

TRUCK CRASHES POLE; 4 HURT

Four men, passengers in an up-truck, were slightly injured when a truck, loaded with a large quantity of goods, crashed through the window of the trolley on Broadway, Everett, today.

The truck, operated by J. J. Manning, of 227 Main St., Charlestown, was attempting to pass the trolley, which was stopped to take on passengers, near the terminal.

The injured men, Philip Davis, of 121 St., Guy Robinson, of Elmwood St., Albert Dook, of 121 St., and Paul Kendrick, of Park St., all of Everett, declined medical treatment and continued to the terminal.

DART CHARGED AS KILLER

A warrant charging first degree murder was issued for the arrest of Wilfred F. Dart, 24, of Newton in Newton district court today by Judge William F. Bacon at the request of Inspector Nicholas F. Woods of Newton point.

The shooting of Charles Reed, 24, of Princeton, Mass., on Sunday night after a race, by two accomplices, had quite a close police officer and collapsed at the scene.

Police assigned Dart's wife, Grace, (in for house yesterday).

"Perhaps, in view of all you have told me, there isn't much point, but I'm going to say it anyway. I want Jennifer settled, young man.

"She is 28 now, Motherless. Her brother is gone. I am not going to live to be an old man. There are certain things we know irrevocably. That is one of them. I have always known it. I will not get old."

"I hate to hear you say that."

"I would give a great deal if you could like my girl."

"That's what I meant just now when I said, I've said just half of what I feel, and the half the less important half."

"You probably know, without my dwelling upon it, the future of a parent I've been to her."

"It's been a mutual failure."

"She got brains and sweet nature."

"God knows she has. Too much of both for my peace of mind. You're going to reap from them, too—mark you."

"I want to tell you a little about myself, Gratton."

"Yes."

"Young man, I am worth one hundred and eighty million dollars. And yet, personally, I have never succeeded. My success succeeded."

"I said once of you that you asked for bread and got a gold nugget."

"Excellent. I would have a hard time getting a jury to vote me sympathy, but I am an artist of success, today, Gratton, as you see one sitting here, as I've been the days when I used to figure my plans on the backs of railroad tickets and counter in a hardware store."

"I know that."

"That is why there is something about a young fellow like you, an aura not to be deterred; something that is just about me. I want you to look at me, said he as you said, in his home as I was."

FAIRLY TRUE STORY LITTLE LADY BEAR

ANNA CATHERINE HAD PULLED BACK THE CURTAINS

ANNA CATHERINE is going home tomorrow, thought Helen as she slipped into a pink chifon and lace negligee. She pulled the draw curtain back from the open French window letting the morning light into her bedroom, then stepped out on the terrace and looked down on Park Avenue.

Well, she had a good time, thanks to Bob Coats. Bob was certainly a life saver when it came to entertaining waiting nines from upstairs. No one but Bob would put up with going again to all the shows he had already seen with a little dumb-bell like Anna Catherine. Not that the girl wasn't pretty, any girl could be pretty at her age. But she didn't seem to know anything about anything.

Helen herself possessed of much useful and important information. She knew that her looking ten years younger than her age and she pressed into her dressing table mirror this morning to confirm it.

She knew how to get up; she knew how to get into a car; she knew how to give presents without her giving anything in return—and she knew how to take them back to the stores and get cash for them. And she also knew the best broker in town.

Her Lucky Day Helen Now a Baby Bear

That was Bob Coats. It had been a lucky day, the one on which she had brought her divorce settlement check to his office and opened an account. Helen was now a "baby bear" who was one of those contributing to the depression by letting that stock would go down instead of up.

At the end of the day, she had been very successful. She had sold her stock for $100,000 in spite of extravagant spending and she was "short" on $200 shares in Auburn, a stock that Bob and she people in the future assured her would be the riches.

It was now ten-fifteen. Anna Catherine had dressed herself and gone out. "Probably she was out for the thrill of seeing the sup rise over Queens from the Empire State tower," thought Helen. "Ten-fifteen time to find out about the opening."

She called Bob's office. Mr. Coats wasn't going to be in today, his secretary told her. She was having too good a time on the money he was making for her. Then he would threaten to steer her account on the rocks to bring her to terms. It was great fun—something to talk about over highballs after the theater.

Helen never telephoned an astrologer whose publicity almost amounted to fame. Yet she always had very good news for her to-day, she was told, she could do anything with confidence. This was one of her days.

Helen took her line about dressing. It was over an hour before she had finished. Then the phone rang. Auburn had started a spectacular comeback and there was talk of a corner.

Helen was frantic. She tried to get at the astrologer again, but the lines were busy. She called her friend Towne in another brokerage house. Yes, the corner in Auburn was the talk of the market. He would certainly advise that the short side of Auburn was a very dangerous position. It was now up 8 points from the opening.

She Was Out $40,000
Had Resort to Bromides

Helen took a couple of bromides to quiet her nerves. This was worse than the 1928 market break. She was out $40,000. She called Archer, Bob's partner. He said he had better not call her and advise her to get out of Auburn. It had been up ten points, but was now back to eight.

"Well, it may be all the way back. Isn't that so?" Helen asked.

"There's no telling what a shock in that position will do," he said. "It's very dangerous."

Helen decided to hang on but she was in despair. Then Archer got her on the phone. This time she wasn't asked to make a decision. Auburn was up 14 points. Under the circumstances, said Bob's partner, they did not feel they could carry the stock on less than a 20-point margin. Unless she could arrange to get them $100,000 they were going to sell her out. They felt that they simply had delayed too long.

Helen realized there was no use pleading. She hung up the telephone and buried her face in the pillows of her bed, but she couldn't cry. She lay there looking over the edge of the bed at the clock. The hands of the Oriental rug in her mind, thinking, thinking of marrying Bob Coats. It wouldn't be an end. It was all she could do.

Getting Married Bob Sends Telegram

The traceries of the rug brought her eyes to a square patch of yellow under the door. With that chirping with which revivers of death messages divine their contents before opening them, she anticipated the message in the telegram the elevator boy had dutifully slipped under the door. She had been instructed, under no circumstances, to ring the bell before then.

"ANNA CATHERINE AND I GETTING MARRIED TODAY STOP WITNESS IS YOUR BLESSING TO THE BER-MIDIANA WIGGLES ADVISE TO TAKE YOUR PROFIT IN AUBURN AND GET OUT OF THE MARKET UNTIL I RETURN LOVE BOB."

MAJOR OPENS L ST. BATHHOUSE

Mayor Curley at noon today turned a key in the door of the new 1500-bathhouse at L st. beach, and officially opened the new recreation center to the public.

A crowd of 1500 bathers followed the mayor through the door of the new structure and through the bathhouse to a platform on the beach facing the sea, where Mayor Curley made the dedicatory address.

Shell Game Operator Shot 'Dead' Starts to Walk Away

It's many years since the Malrose police have had to deal with that old confidence racket known as the shell game.

The first they heard of it was when Mrs. John Pinigree of Beach ave. telephoned a tiger call. She was taking a terrible liking from a stranger on Argyle st. to a stranger on Argyle st.

Patrolman John Buckley went there with a shovel and freed the cat, but his shovel fell prey to the culprit. Buckley then drew his gun and the bullet found its mark.

And then the shell game. The turtle, for such the stranger was, weighing more than 40 pounds, withdrew into his shell and apparently announced a city truck carted him to the police station. But while an argument was underway as to who should have him for soup, the "dead" turtle started snubbing toward the door and it took another bullet to make him a candidate for the turkeys.

COUSINS LOSE DISPLAY MEN IN CONVENTION

Settlement of the contest over the will of Irving Harris Niles in Middlesex Probate Court today makes the "Active Fund of America" richer by approximately $100,000.

Niles, a Cambridge millionaire, left personal property of his own of about $287,000, and other property worth $100,000, to his daughter, Mrs. Niles, valued at approximately $52,000. Irving Niles, after making private bequests of $12,000, left the remainder of his estate to the "Active Fund of America."

Ten cousins contested the will on the ground that Niles was not of sound mind when he made the will. The case was heard before a jury last April and then taken under advisement.

The contestants today withdrew their objection and the will was allowed by Judge Leggat. Counsel for the contestants, William J. Foley of Chicago, director of manufacturers' exhibits, Comptroller of the Treasury, and Director of the Boston Fair, and John F. Sherman, president of the Boston Men's Club, were among the witnesses. Presiding Judge J. J. Sherman, president of the Boston Men's Club, was among the witnesses.

OFFERER USES OFFERS TO AUTO PERMIT COP; FINE $100

Accused today in two hit-and-run cases, Pauline John A. Campbell of the Malden police was suspended by Capt. John M. Ayer.

In one of the auto cases he is alleged to have struck a 60-year-old woman. He is also charged with driving without a license and with neglect of duty and violation of police rules. Campbell has been on the force 20 years and is the biggest Malden officer, being six feet four inches tall and weighing more than 250 pounds.

It cost Frank A. Farrell, of Pelham, N. Y., $100 in Quincy court today to find out that it is not good judgment to stop a police officer on the street and offer him a drink of "real stuff."

Farrell was driving through Chelsea last evening when he stopped his car to ask a pedestrian for directions. He was accompanied by Farrell offered the stranger a drink and produced a bottle of liquor.

The stranger was Chief of Police J. J. Pelletier of Cohasset, Farrell was arrested for driving under the influence of liquor.

ING GAI
CANADA IS

Ont., June 15—Definitely scheduled pickup in building operations throughout Canada are expected, according to a bulletin made public today by the Department of Immigration and Naturalization of the Canadian government.

The bulletin says that the number of building permits issued in the provinces and territories throughout Canada in the first five months of 1984 revealed a total value of $1,785,466 as compared with $1,750,000 in the same period of 1983. The bulletin also says that the total value of $9,906,567 for permits issued in the first five months of March, the building industry's busiest month, was up from $9,400,000 in the same period of 1983.

out that this represents an increase of 39.2 per cent in the total valuation of April 1934. The formula does not appear to be quite so favorable as the figures for April, 1934, when continued, "but it is in the whole sale costs of materials are largely responsible for the difference in the lower prices for building materials is taken into consideration this year's totals compare very favorably with when building permits were $1 million total.

ance of the investigation of American college sport. It is too general and the reference to the program is too inserted in a football player, which is about the only specific evidence, in the entire report, of questionable tactics, was commented upon at length by the press more than a year ago. In the state of the Carnegie Foundation investigations of college sport, it has been apparent that there is a motive of much importance to a certain group, behind the project. One may be led to believe from the comments of these reports that those who have developed college athletics in the United States, winning the various sports, that they should be given back to the boys, or assigned to the policy authorities.

A cartoon illustration depicting a dramatic moment. In the foreground, a player in a Red Sox uniform is shown from the waist up, looking extremely shocked with wide eyes and an open mouth. In the background, a car labeled 'White Sox' is driving off a steep, dark cliff. A large, dark, mechanical object, possibly a fire hydrant or a large pipe, is visible in the lower right foreground. The scene is set against a dark, stormy sky.

Three White Sox are on the injured list. Carl Reynolds, crack catcher and batter, has a broken leg; Bosed, Jolly, slugger flying out of the lineup; and Ed Lyons, pitcher, a broken leg. Ted Lyons, who has lost his use of his arm.

This is the last day for trading players in the league clubs. With the exception of the Red Sox, no team attending the ordination of his son, the Red Sox will be unable that the Red Sox will be involved in any last-minute deals.

CALL SPECIAL SESSION FOR PROSPERITY LOAN!

PRESIDENT HOOVER HAS A LARGE OPPORTUNITY to prove useful to the American people at this time of economic emergency by calling Congress together for a special session to pass the necessary enabling legislation for a prosperity loan.

To be of maximum effectiveness, this relief program must be set into motion at once.

The thought behind William Randolph Hearst's proposal for a huge loan to finance important national public works was to push forward these essential projects at a time when great multitudes of unemployed workers were in need of jobs.

After the plan for social reconstruction and for the restoration of prosperity has been authorized, the administrative task of planning to spend the funds economically and fruitfully will present itself.

Any delay will tend to reduce the efficacy of the remedy.

Little time can be lost if the project is to be initiated soon enough to prevent another Winter of intense economic distress.

Even if moderate spontaneous trade improvement should result in a reduction of unemployment by the end of the year, the third Winter of economic distress might be the most difficult yet, because the personal savings of afflicted families have been exhausted.

The great value of Mr. Hearst's proposal that $5,000,000,000 be raised by a Federal bond issue and spent for public improvements lies in carrying forward the work at a time when private industry is failing to provide jobs for more than 5,000,000 workers.

The economics behind the idea entails accelerating planned public works when private trade is slack and retarding such public activities when private business begins to flourish.

Unless the engineer in the White House decides that the occasion calls for expeditious action and the elimination of political red tape, the tonic will be too long postponed.

Delay in restoring a normal economic balance entails far more than a loss of potential business profits.

Its social cost is even greater than the loss of the potential productive power of millions of men and machines.

Beyond the purely economic costs are the even greater losses in continued malnutrition of large portions of the population.

Apathetic political leaders should be reminded that even during the depression phase of the business cycle babies and children of the poorer families are insistently clamoring for a chance for good food, ample shelter and fresh air.

Unless willing heads of families can get work, they cannot give their offspring these elemental things which should be the heritage of every American child.

The depression has already been prolonged to the extent of reducing the effectiveness of private charity.

The self-respecting worker, with American ideals of individualism, wants no European dole, but is eager for an opportunity to work again.

Any quickening of the process of economic recovery through Government intervention along economically sound lines will pay dividends in the welfare of millions of families, whose sufferings in the face of overproduction of foodstuffs and other commodities constitute an indictment against modern business management in the large.

The great and outstanding national problem of this period is correction of the curse of unemployment.

In the face of harsh economic conditions, unemployed workers have been patient and long suffering.

The absence of social disturbances thus far bespeaks the co-operative spirit of those who have had to bear the brunt of the social cost of the deflation.

President Hoover should not be inert when the national emergency calls for affirmative action.

He cannot afford to wait until December to present to Congress a plan for relieving distress next Winter.

It would be the part of wisdom for Mr. Hoover to summon Congress into special session immediately to pass the enabling legislation for tapping the national reservoir of capital for humane and socially desirable purposes.

The occasion challenges the capacity of our Government to act quickly and effectively, without the goading of a calamitous war or other unfortunate visitation of a wrathful Mother Nature.

Political intelligence is on trial, and the stakes are extremely large.

After months of aimless drifting, a concrete plan has been offered to members of the House of Representatives and of the Senate.

Let's not play politics with human misery, but let's proceed without delay along non-partisan lines to apply the wisdom of modern economics to an emergency situation.

Spain Recognizes the Jews 439 Years Too Late

In Madrid last week, for the first time in 439 years, a Jewish marriage ceremony was performed in an improvised synagogue.

The government of the new Spanish Republic recently lifted the legal disabilities against Jews, some of which had been in force since 1492, the year in which Columbus discovered America.

The bride and bridegroom in the ceremony were Spanish Jews from Turkey. They were married by a rabbi from Ceuta, Morocco.

Other Jews, descendants of those banished four centuries ago by the Grand Inquisitor Torquemada, are expected to return to Spain, now that the republic has guaranteed complete liberty of worship to all classes and creeds.

Intelligent persons will say: "The republic has a good idea, but it is a bit late."

When Spain ejected the Jews, she was the greatest nation in the world. Thereafter, her record was one of swift decay.

Had she kept the Jews to work for her, amass wealth for her and THINK for her, she would occupy a bigger place on the map than she does now.

A Prohibition Triumph 15,000 Paralyzed

One outstanding achievement of prohibition last year was to paralyze 15,000 persons.

The information comes from the American Medical Association, in session at Philadelphia.

The paralysis, some of it temporary and some permanent, was caused by "jake." That is the denatured Jamaica ginger that circulates out in rural districts where the better grades of bootleg liquor are hard to get.

Predictions of ten years ago that prohibition would be a great health measure make interesting reading now.

Hell in Pictures And in Real Life

Paris art circles are deeply interested in one Amos Nattini, painter, whose entire career has been devoted to picturing Hell. A recent exhibit of his works was so crowded that many admirers had to be turned away.

M. Nattini took Dante's Divine Comedy as his motif. He has succeeded in depicting the most gruesome flights of the Italian poet's imagination with amazing fidelity.

To treat his subject with the proper amount of realism he spent many months studying the attitudes of coal heavers and dock laborers. The lessons he learned thus he has translated into remarkable figures of bodies and souls in every stage of torment.

Bostonians, however, will wonder why he wasted so much time on those researches.

A trip to our fair city and a few minutes in the subway during the rush hour would have given him a subject on which to exercise his genius for the rest of his life.

Capital Silhouettes

MAYBE SOME of those traveling American mayors who turned up their noses at the sight of their glasses at the vintage wines of France were waiting to be asked to have a little bathtub and ginger ale.

OF COURSE, we can understand that the introduction of the Russian shield to the wheat fields of Kansas was a Soviet plot, but with an increase of 46,453,398 bushels in the crop, Moscow seems to have fallen a down even on that.

DIRTY WORK AT THE CROSSROADS

Honestly, we hate to print this. Look at that train rushing onward. You know those cats and dogs too well, and how much they weigh, passing over your stomach. Think of a whole train-load of them.

And look at Old Prohibition—something ought to be done about him. Mr. Business Revival could do it, but that poor moron doesn't seem to know what anything is all about.

Prohibition's two little assistants, in the right-hand corner, with a load of stiff rig of the boat, you need not notice except.

Everything looks bad for the little lady, but follow closely the Maudie to dine, then to the theater and on to Leon Gordon's studio where came a merry crowd. Home late and outside my chamber waited a taxi man with a sign on his back that read: "I am a movie orchestra pit."

Don't miss the name of that new, high-powered Wall Street express train, "The Insecurities Limited." She's on time.

Don't Pity Under Dog
DON'T BE too sorry for the Under Dog. Maybe he LIKES being the Under Dog. Suffering, to some queer souls, is both convenient and consoling. Like all humans he is big, they long to be Big Shots — years for a applause, crave the spotlight, they envy, with envy, those who do achieve popularity and success, and ponder sadly over their own Bad Breaks. If they could only have their Chance!

Of course, they could have their chance if they'd get out and hustle for it like other people. But hustling is the best thing they won't do. Maybe they are afraid, lazy, or have been badly hurt by life. These handicaps, however, happen to everyone. They can be overcome. But the chronic Under Dog does not want to overcome them. He has found an easier, quicker way to oblige it like other people. But hustling is the best thing they won't do. Maybe they are afraid, lazy, or have been badly hurt by life. These handicaps, however, happen to everyone. They can be overcome. But the chronic Under Dog does not want to overcome them. He has found an easier, quicker way to oblige it like other people.
